

Hello everyone! I have a very exciting opportunity for all of you!

The new NHS Nightingale Hospital needs your help. They want you to decorate the walls of the hospital's wellbeing area - that's the area where the doctors, nurses and all of the other hard working staff go to have a well-earned break during their important shifts at work.

So if you are super artistic and would like a chance to say thank you to the NHS staff, they would love for you to draw or paint a picture that could be put on the wall (so big that it takes up the whole wall). You could do a picture of the doctors and nurses hard at work helping people or anything you think would make our doctors and nurses know that they are appreciated. You can also decorate it with rainbows and messages of support. The brighter and more colourful the better.

How to get involved:

Take a photo of your child's artwork - JUST the artwork, NOT your child, filling the whole frame of the photo. The photo needs to be a good quality, high resolution photo taken face on to the picture in daylight.

Your entries need to be in no later than Friday 10th April. Please include the child's name and age in the bottom right corner of your photo (you could also include this in the email).

Please send your entries to cdac@altro.com

Have fun and good luck!
